Over a 100 children have lost their mothers due to domestic violence

Domestic violence in Portugal has left 107 children without their mothers over the past two years. This is according to data on domestic violence compiled by the Union for Women’s Alternatives and Answers, and, the union warns, little is known about what happens to those children. According to newspaper i, with the exception of the union’s reports, no official report makes reference to what happens to the children of women who are killed as a result of domestic violence.